Practitioners working in nature conservation and development share successful approaches, projects and methods – or solutions.

By breaking a solution down into its key components, or building blocks, PANORAMA contributors make their lessons learned accessible to others.

Building blocks can be adapted, recombined and re-applied by someone else – a solution seeker with a specific challenge - building on what has worked before.

ONLY if we learn from each other's success can we achieve better decision-making and greater impact for conservation and development.
